I am writing to apply for the Head of Marketing position at Nexopharm GmbH. What stands out to me is the honest framing: build the marketing function from scratch, start at 25 hours, and scale when the business reaches â‹500k ARR. That is the kind of challenge I respond to.

My background is in engineering, not marketing. I have spent the last four years building full-stack platforms, AI-powered applications, and real-time systems from the ground up. I have launched products with no existing infrastructure, designed workflows where none existed, and worked directly with founders to turn ideas into working systems. I know how to build from zero because I have done it repeatedly.

One area that particularly interests me is the B2B and B2C split in a regulated market. I have built platforms that serve multiple user roles customers, sellers, agents, and administrators within a single ecosystem. That required designing clear processes, managing data integrity, and ensuring every stakeholder had the right tools. I approach structure the same way: understand the constraints, build the foundation, and iterate fast.

In addition to my technical experience, I work effectively across multidisciplinary teams and communicate clearly with both technical and non-technical stakeholders. I am fluent in Bengali and English, have working knowledge of Russian and Hindi, and enjoy collaborating in international and cross-cultural environments.

I am not a career marketer, but I know how to build, how to take ownership, and how to operate without a playbook. If that is what you need, I would welcome the chance to talk.

I have attached my CV for your review.

Sincerely,
