I am writing to apply for the Werkstudent:in Marketing position at Affinity Global GmbH, specifically within the Opinary business unit. What stands out to me about Opinary is how it uses in-article polling to generate meaningful audience insights for major publishers like the Financial Times and FAZ, while enabling advertising that feels native rather than intrusive. This intersection of data, user engagement, and publisher value is something I find genuinely interesting.

Although my primary background is in software engineering, I have developed strong analytical and communication skills through my technical work. In my experience building full-stack applications, I have regularly worked with data visualization, KPI tracking, and user behavior analysis. I am comfortable translating raw data into clear, actionable insights, which I believe is directly relevant to monitoring trends in Opinary polls and contributing to marketing materials.

I am also experienced with tools like Figma for visual design and have created presentations, dashboards, and case-study-style documentation for technical projects. I understand the importance of maintaining coherent brand communication across different formats and channels. My structured approach to work means I can independently manage tasks while also contributing ideas and spotting opportunities for improvement.

In addition to my technical experience, I work effectively across multidisciplinary teams and communicate clearly with both technical and non-technical stakeholders. I am fluent in Bengali and English, have working knowledge of Russian and Hindi, and enjoy collaborating in international and cross-cultural environments.

I am currently pursuing my Bachelor’s in Software Engineering at Voronezh State University, which has taught me to work methodically and think critically. I would welcome the opportunity to bring my analytical mindset and hands-on attitude to the Opinary marketing team. I have attached my CV for your review.

Sincerely,
