I am writing to apply for the Head of Brand position at yummy. Your mission to make healthy instant meals accessible to everyone, combined with your impressive growth and ambitious retail expansion, is exactly the kind of challenge I find compelling. I am drawn to the opportunity to build a lovebrand from a strong foundation.

My professional experience has been in software engineering, where I have designed and developed scalable web applications using Laravel, Next.js, and React. This work has required strategic thinking, cross-functional collaboration, and a focus on user engagement. I have built platforms that serve thousands of users, and I understand how to create systems that support brand growth and community interaction.

In my previous role as a Web Developer, I was responsible for the full product lifecycle, from concept to deployment. I worked closely with stakeholders to define features, built responsive and SEO-friendly interfaces, and implemented real-time features like chat and notifications. This experience has given me a strong foundation in understanding user needs and delivering solutions that drive engagement.

One area that particularly interests me is the opportunity to build a community that is genuinely invested in the brand and its mission. I have experience developing platforms that foster user interaction and loyalty, and I am confident I can apply these skills to help yummy become the number one ready-meal lovebrand in Germany.

In addition to my technical experience, I work effectively across multidisciplinary teams and communicate clearly with both technical and non-technical stakeholders. I am fluent in Bengali and English, have working knowledge of Russian and Hindi, and enjoy collaborating in international and cross-cultural environments.

I have attached my CV for your review. I would welcome the opportunity to discuss how my background in building scalable platforms and engaging user communities can contribute to yummy’s next phase of growth.

Sincerely,
